Common Tourist Scams

1. Gulangyu ferry touts

   What happens: Near the piers, touts, sometimes taxi drivers, claim official tickets are sold out and push "package tickets" with attractions or a guide, at several times the price. Unlicensed guides then lead you to pearl and tea shops that pay them commission.

   Tips: Book ferry tickets yourself on the 厦门轮渡+ mini program, using your passport. Ignore anyone selling tickets or tours at the pier.

2. Seafood rip-offs

   What happens: Drivers or trishaw riders "recommend" seafood places that pay them. Prices are quoted per 两, making the bill 10× what you expected per 斤. Live seafood is weighed with water or swapped for dead stock, and cooking fees only appear on the bill. (Zengcuo'an, Gulangyu, beach stalls)

   Tips: Choose places with clearly marked prices, confirm the price per 斤 and the cooking fee before ordering, and watch the weighing.

3. Cheap day-tour flyers

   What happens: Flyers offer "¥99 day tours, no shopping". On the bus, ferry and guide fees are added, most of the day is spent in shops, and attractions are only photo stops. You pay to a personal WeChat with no contract.

   Tips: Skip roadside tour deals. Book tours on Trip.com.

4. Boat trip touts (Huandao Road)

   What happens: Beach touts sell cheap sea trips, then add "service" or "outer sea" fees once you're on board. The ride is short and disappointing.

   Tips: Book boat trips on Trip.com in advance, and check the duration, route and all fees.

5. Beach photo & flower traps

   What happens: Costumed characters, such as Monkey King or Mickey, jump into your photo, then charge per person. Aunties press roses into your hand and demand payment once you take them. (Baicheng, Huangcuo, Music Square)

   Tips: Don't accept flowers or pose with characters. Just wave and walk on.

6. Nanputuo "blessings"

   What happens: Fake monks or "volunteers" outside the temple offer free incense or fortune readings, then demand big donations or sell pricey prayer beads.

   Tips: Free incense is given inside the temple. Politely decline anyone offering it outside.

7. E-bike rental traps

   What happens: Private e-bike rentals claim scratches on return to keep your deposit. E-bikes are also banned in many areas, and police can impound them and fine you.

   Tips: Use shared bikes through Alipay or WeChat instead.

8. Tea & specialty shops

   What happens: Free tastings of flower tea or pastries, then the goods are weighed without the unit price being mentioned, so a small bag costs hundreds of yuan. Fake dried goods and herbs are common. (Gulangyu, Shapowei)

   Tips: Ask the unit price before anything is weighed, and buy from established shops.

9. Taxi detours

   What happens: Chatty drivers recommend restaurants, attractions or shops that pay them commission, or take the long way round.

   Tips: Use DiDi, so the route and fare are tracked.

10. Street photographers

    What happens: Photographers along the coast quote one price, then charge per person or per photo after the shoot.

    Tips: Agree on the total price and number of photos in writing, e.g. by WeChat message, before starting.
